Case Study: E.ON Energy

As one of the UK's leading energy companies, E.ON had very bespoke requirements when decommissioning one of its oil-fired power stations. Careful assessment and servicing of their existing 525 extinguishers meant that some could be re-deployed to a new gas turbine station, reducing waste and saving cost. Safelincs provided new fire extinguisher units where required to increase their total units to over 750. Safelincs worked closely with the team at E.ON to set up new fire points and install the necessary signage as well as offering professional advice on their location. All work was carried out in accordance to BS5306 and certified by BAFE approved engineers.
